Writing

Once, at the lesson of literature, I hear phrase of Mark Twain "Courage of fear is resistance to fear", mastery of fear - not absence of fear". Then I don't understand this phrase, but now I can say what it mean.

In my opinion, Mark Twain want to say that even you can be brave on courage it not mean that you can't scared of something. All people are created equal, all people can have fear. I can say more: if you can fight (on already fight) with your fear - you are the bravest person. Because of that I agree with author.

For example, front hero from poem of A.S. Pushkin "Captain's daughter" fight with his fear - he don't scared of Pugachov speak with him like equal and don't give his lover in the arms of enemy.

Also anti-example: front hero from poem of I. Bunin "Clean breath" scared that the girl (that he loved) use him and he killed. So fear can make more fear. In the end I want to say what people can choose all: fear of fighting with fear. We don't know what can happen. But literature examples can give us a sign, what better - fight with fear, than scared of all in the world.
